

ENTREPRENEURIAL SPIRIT

– From Our Perspective

Entrepreneurship runs through our family's veins. From the very first small venture, Vanessa and Paul have been driven by curiosity, creativity, and the desire to identify opportunities that add value — for ourselves, for others, and for the communities we touch.

This isn't just about making money; it's about problem-solving, innovation, and teaching our children life-long lessons about responsibility, creativity, and financial independence.

Identify Opportunities

Solve Problems

Create Value

Empower Others

1 My Early Ventures

I started with something small but practical: importing iPhone screen protectors from Alibaba. Initially just ten pieces, they sold for $15 each on TradeMe.

10 Pieces
$15 each

Scaled to 100 at a time

Filled containers with in-demand products

We expanded into other trending products like Freeview receivers, digital photo frames, and more — always aiming to bring valuable, in-demand products to New Zealand.

One notable experience was funding a dream for my brother, who had disabilities. Using proceeds from these early ventures, we enabled him, his carer, and mother to travel to Disneyland for a once-in-a-lifetime experience — a reminder that business can empower lives beyond the numbers.

2 Family-Oriented Businesses

Over the years, we created several ventures to meet market gaps:

SUPERCUTE

- ✓ Focused on children's clothing (0–10 years)
- ✓ Imported trendy, high-quality items from China
- ✓ Addressed limited availability and variety locally

PRINCESS AND THE PIRATE

- ✓ Coordinated children's birthday parties
- ✓ Provided themed equipment: tables, chairs, bouncy castles
- ✓ Curated full experiences: tableware, gift bags, costumes from Disney and international suppliers
- ✓ Offered catering, entertainment, and even live animals, fully organized for families

OUR APPROACH

- ✓ Each venture was hands-on from importing to selling, teaching the kids how real businesses operate.
- ✓ Children participated early: lemonade stands, selling bulk candy at local events, or donating proceeds to charity while learning the value of money.

We intentionally made these experiences educational, practical, and fun, combining creativity with business sense.

3 Paul's Passion Meets Business

Paul's entrepreneurial mindset complements mine:

- ✓ He imported motorbike fairings and gear from China, distributing across New Zealand and Australia.
- ✓ His hobby of restoring classic Honda bikes is both a creative outlet and a lesson in diligence, craft, and problem-solving.

Together, we modeled innovation, persistence, and the ability to see opportunity where others may not.

Innovation

Persistence

Resourcefulness

Craftsmanship

Opportunity

4 The Family Learning Philosophy

From a young age, our children have learned to:

- ✓ Identify opportunities in everyday life
- ✓ Turn small ideas into practical ventures
- ✓ Understand the principles of supply, demand, and value
- ✓ Take initiative, make decisions, and experience the consequences safely
- ✓ Combine fun with responsibility, whether selling toys, candies, or running mini-projects

OUR GOAL

We want to pass on the entrepreneurial spirit so our children grow up confident, resourceful, and aware of the power of creativity combined with action. These lessons are integrated naturally into daily life, family projects, and even playtime.

5 Key Takeaways for Parents

Entrepreneurship is About More Than Money

It's about teaching independence, creativity, and critical thinking that last a lifetime.

Start Small

A simple product or service teaches lessons in decision-making, marketing, and value.

Engage Children Early

Allow them to manage simple projects safely, from lemonade stands to crafting and selling items at markets.

Blend Hobbies and Business

Pursue your passions while showing kids the process of turning ideas into income.

Use Every Experience as a Learning Opportunity

Challenges, successes, and even setbacks are powerful teachers.

We don't just build businesses.
We build people, purpose, and freedom.

Teach Life Skills

Create Lasting Opportunities

Build Financial Independence

Leave a Legacy of Freedom

REMEMBER

Every small action today can create big freedom tomorrow.

TOOLS WE USE

Alibaba

TradeMe

Shopify

Canva

Xero

CONTINUOUSLY LEARNING

We read, experiment, and adapt constantly. The world changes fast, and so do we.

OUR MISSION

To live intentionally, create value, and empower our children to build lives of freedom, contribution, and meaning.